Overview

Continue and complete your training to be a chef!

What you'll learn

You'll prepare complex meat, fish (including shellfish), poultry and vegetable dishes, as well as desserts, cakes and biscuits - all using the highest quality ingredients.

You'll also cover the preparation of soups, hot and cold sauces and pasta dishes.

As part of the course, three mandatory awards: Health & Safety, Food Safety and Working Relationships will be completed.

Assessments / Exams

There are tests throughout the course to assess your theoretical knowledge.

You'll be assessed through real work experience in our commercial and training restaurant - The Chef's Hat.

And you'll produce a portfolio of evidence to show your progress.

You will also cover three mandatory awards: Health & Safety, Food Safety and Working Relationships.

Entry requirements

You'll need to have successfully completed a relevant NVQ Level 2 qualification.

There will be an interview following your application and you'll need to supply references.

Links with employers

You'll study in our industry-standard training kitchens which serve our on-campus, public-facing restaurant, The Chef's Hat.

This will give you real work experience, increasing your opportunities for employment.

What this course leads to

There are a variety of career opportunities available to successful students. These include becoming a chef in a hotel, a cook in a hospital or a similar kitchen, a pâtissière or a cake decorator.

Other employment opportunities will also be open to you. These include jobs within research & development and the hygiene industry, and working as a food representative.
